Korea Trust Funds at the IDB: Retrospect and Prospect

InterContinental Real Santo Domingo | June 11-12, 2019

The purpose of the workshop is to enhance the awareness of Korea's contribution to the development of the LAC region. It will not only introduce accomplishments and stories from the field about projects financed by Korea, but it will also offer an open dialogue to discuss development challenges in the region. Specifically, the sessions will focus on the following sectors: (i) Science and Technology, and (ii) Urban Development and Social Investment.

The event invites key stakeholders from the private, public, and non-profit sector for knowledge exchange and promotion of the Korea trust funds activities. The presentations on the successful projects will be made in Day 1 followed by a roundtable on the selected proposals for future collaborations with Korea and site visits to STI and HUD related projects in Day 2.

The workshop will be held in English with simultaneous translation to Spanish.

II. Korea and the IDB

This year marks the 14th anniversary of Korea's membership to the IDB. Korea has played a positive role in the development of the Latin America and the Caribbean region through the mobilization of multiple trust funds to facilitate technological innovation, reduce poverty, promote social development and increase public sector efficiency. This session aims to establish a general background of Korea and the IDB by providing an introductory presentation about Korea's development history and its economic relationship with Latin America and the Caribbean. The overview of Korean contribution to the region and the activities of its funds administered by the IDB will also be briefly introduced.

III. Showcase of KTF Projects: Science and Technology

The LAC region has been seeking ways to realize knowledge-based economy through development in STI, but too often the countries struggle to make ends meet with limited resources, capacities, and infrastructure. The access to new technologies and telecommunications infrastructure, such as broadband, through the support of Korean funds has thus been crucial. This session will showcase the Korean-financed projects that further help develop innovation ecosystems in the region. Specifically, the presentations will focus on how the selected projects helped to improve the productivity and quality of government services, and how individuals and businesses are benefitting from digitalization and adoption of digital technologies.

IV. Showcase of KTF Projects: Urban Development and Social Investment

In this session, IDB representatives and beneficiaries of LAC countries will share their experiences regarding urban development and social investment projects financed by Korea. Specifically, this session will focus on how the selected cases have contributed to addressing urban poverty and improving the lives of vulnerable groups in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Moderator: Mr. Andres Guillermo Blanco Blanco, Lead Specialist in Urban Development and Housing, Inter-American Development Bank

Urban Development

In LAC countries, 125 million out of 180 million people live in poverty in cities and suffer from lack of housing and degraded urban habitat. Helping to transform lives, Korea financed that strengthen the management capacity for urban governance and expanded affordable housing for the poorest quintile by introducing new modes of tenancy and promoting the participation of the private sector. The following two presentations will introduce the projects that have contributed to making cities safe and sustainable – by means to improve urban planning and ensure affordable housing. It will also highlight the follow-up works in progress for a meaningful transformation.

15:00 - 15:20 Sustainable Urban Cities
Mr. Carlos Montoya Baquero, Dispatch Advisor to the Mayor, Montería City, Colombia

15:20 - 15:40 Housing Solutions and Investment
Ms. Mi-seon Park, Research Fellow, Korea Research Institute for Human Settlements

Social Investment and Communities Development

Ensuring the access to social services is an important measure to alleviate poverty, support vulnerable groups and promote quality living. Through technical assistance, Korea has expanded its cooperation with LAC countries in building a solid foundation in strengthening workforce development, especially for youth and vulnerable groups. The following presentation will introduce the project that contributed to reduce poverty and promote the development of skills and access to quality programs for afro-descendants in Colombia.
